 - d. From: O'Sullivan, Barry "New Zealand Dress Regulations 1852-1909. Militia. Volunteers, Constabulary, and Permanent Forces" 2019, page 55: "Captain Charles Edward Bunny was elected captain of the Nelson Artillery Cadets in November 1875 and in December 1877 a full captain in the Nelson City Rifles. He is seen here wearing the full-dress uniform of a captain in the artillery. His rank is displayed on the collar in the way of a crown and a star and the lace to the top of the collar, and on his cuffs with the traced Austrian knot being surrounded by a row of eyes. His tunic is slightly different from the regulation Royal Artillery pattern in that it has an embroidered grenade on his shoulder straps. The buttons feature a single gun and crown and the waist plate shows the Royal Arms of Queen Victoria and symbols of England, Scotland and Ireland. These waist plates were worn by artillery volunteers until replaced by the design mentioned in the 1881 dress regulations. The black bear skin busby has a white goat's hair plume with a ring halfway. The plume is secured in a grenade with an artillery gun embossed on the side. Around the upper left upper arm is a black crepe band to indicate mourning."
